

In Scenario 5, reassigning the lawyer immediately is NOT the complete or primary solution—it is only the final safety net if the lawyer fails to respond. Because Abdul Malek faces low literacy, unstable contact (shop phone), long travel distances, and wage loss, replacing the panel lawyer without fixing the communication gap would only repeat the same failure with a new lawyer. The best possible solution combines Automated Lawyer Accountability Monitoring with Accessible Citizen Updates, executed in a structured sequence.

1. How the System Alert Works (The DLAO Dashboard)

Under the Legal Aid Rules and Regulations, panel lawyers are legally required to submit hearing updates and case progress reports after every court date.

- The Indicator: The DLAO Triage Dashboard monitors case inactivity using a Panel Lawyer SLA Tracker.
- The Failure Trigger: If the assigned lawyer misses two consecutive court update deadlines, the system triggers a Red Flag Alert on the DLAO's dashboard and automatically freezes the lawyer's stage-based fee processing.
- Formal Notice First: The DLAO does not immediately dismiss the lawyer. The system generates an automated show-cause notice requiring the lawyer to upload the missing court orders within a strict 48-hour window.

2. Should the DLAO Assign a New Lawyer?

- If the lawyer responds with valid court updates: The DLAO retains the lawyer and warns them against future delays.
- If the lawyer fails to respond or shows gross neglect: YES. Under the Legal Aid Services Act, 2000, the DLAO formally cancels the existing Wakalatnama (power of attorney), reassigns the case to a new, active Panel Lawyer, and flags the previous lawyer in the DBLA performance system.

3. The Complete Solution: Protecting Abdul Malek

To ensure Malek does not waste money travelling 30 km or lose daily wages just to check a date, the solution must fix his access barrier:

1. Automated 16699 Voice/IVR Status Check:
 - Malek does not need a smartphone or literacy. He can dial the 16699 National Legal Aid Helpline from any basic phone (including the local shop's phone).
 - An automated Bangla voice prompt reads his next hearing date and lawyer assignment status using his Case ID or NID.
2. Proactive Failure Safeguard:
 - Before Malek travels to Barguna town, he calls 16699 or checks at a Union Digital Center (UDC).
 - If the panel lawyer has missed updates, the IVR informs Malek: "Your case is under DLAO review; do not travel until notified." This prevents unnecessary wage loss.
3. Log of Failed Contact Attempts:
 - Because the phone number on file belongs to a local shop, the system logs every attempt to reach Malek. If an outbound notice fails, the system routes the message to the nearest UDC operator or local paralegal to inform him in person.

Summary

The best solution is Automated SLA Tracking & Notice \rightarrow Lawyer Reassignment (if unresponsive) \rightarrow Voice-First 16699 Status Access for Abdul Malek.

Reassigning the lawyer holds legal providers accountable, while 16699 voice integration ensures Malek stays informed without losing his livelihood.
